

Me: Wouldn't giant hologram projectors need a lot of power?

Them: Yes, powered by the giant coal fired power stations in Australia.

Australian Conspiracy

©2024-6 Julia Clement. CC-BY-SA 4.0 Some rights reserved.
This zine is intentionally inaccurate for satirical / comedic effect.

Feel free to print and distribute unmodified copies of this zine.
Some permissions to modify and distribute modified copies under a Creative Commons License are listed at <https://juliaclement.com/zine/australia-conspiracy>

Yalu?

Me: But the Yalu is over 2,000 km from Wuhan.

Them: It was a big flood.

Me: A flood that big would push the ice wall off the edge of the world and drain the oceans.

Australia Doesn't Exist

Did you know there are people who believe Australia doesn't exist?

Not just wishful thinking, we all have that. They really believe it doesn't exist.

Introduction, Fake Conspiracies

What about those conspiracy theories?

Powerful forces doing evil?

Well meaning medical staff
doing harm?

Incompetent fools destroying the economy?

I love mocking them & even creating related theories of my own.

One day I'll hear one of mine in the wild.

1

Antartica

Them: The ice
wall is at the South Pole,
not the North.
The Americans
have a base
there that generates powerful holograms to make it look like a point.

6

Neither does Atlantis

It turns out that most of the people
who believe Australia
doesn't exist
also believe Atlantis
doesn't exist.

This should be easy to debunk, so I

3

asked "If Atlantis doesn't exist,
where do the

mermaids
come from?"
Their
answer:
They
escaped
from a lab
in Wuhan
when the Yalu River
flooded.